Agenda dispatch: 5 th September 2018	Background / fact finding for review – introduction to Hackney's Integrated Gangs Unit	Maurice Mason, Community Safety Team Manager, Chief Executive's Directorate	This item is intended to give Members an introduction to Hackney's Integrated Gangs Unit (IGU). The Unit was establishment in 2010 following the Community Safety Partnership identifying tackling gang violence as a strategic priority and a detailed analysis being carried out of gang violence in the borough to develop a comprehensive understanding of the alliances, disputes and tensions between different gangs. The IGU brings together the police, a range of Council services, and others including Probation Services, the DWP and organisations providing one to one advice, training and support to divert people at risk away from gangs¹. It was the first co-located Integrated Gangs Unit (IGU) in the UK². While designing the Unit the Council and partners drew learning from the approach taken by Glasgow's Violence Reduction Unit, which has received wide recognition for following what is sometimes defined as a public health approach. After it opened in 2010 gang-flagged violence fell for a number of years. There were 114 gun related crimes in the borough in the year to February 2011, compared to 66 in the year to February 2018. In the 2 years to November 24th 2018 there were no gang-related murders. This was prior to the recent spike in violence both in Hackney and elsewhere.

The Commission was advised that good progress had been made. With work being progressed according to its priority, all critical (highest priority) recommendations had been addressed. Large numbers of the high priority (second highest priority) recommendations had been progressed. However, it was also acknowledged that further progress was needed. The Director of Housing Services has been asked to provide a paper for this item setting out the latest progress against the FRAs. He will be in attendance at the meeting to present the paper and answer questions. With Members having asked to keep progress under review moving forward, a further update will be submitted to the meeting of 11th April.

This item has been scheduled for the Commission to receive context at an early point around the different sections of the Metropolitan Police (both those managed and operated locally and others which are managed centrally but which will be deployed in Hackney at various times).
	Evidence gathering for review - local policing changes and associated opportunities and risks in relation to tackling serious violence	Chief Superintendent Williams, Central East (Hackney and Tower Hamlets) BCU Commander	Local policing is undergoing significant change. This is in relation to the establishment of 12 Basic Command Units to replace the 32 borough model, with local boroughs merging with others. The announcement was made alongside an acknowledgement of significant financial challenge, with the Met required to make savings of £325m by 2021/22, and expected continued reductions in officer numbers. This builds on significant reductions in funding already imposed. The Council's own Foot the Bill lobbying campaign has highlighted the impact of £600 million in Met Police funding reductions since 2010, with Hackney having seen a reduction from 770 Officers to 584 in the 7 years to October 2017, the most severe cut in London. Within the new Basic Command Unit structure, Hackney has joined with Tower Hamlets to form a Central East Command Unit. This item will explore the implications of these changes on the capacity of the police to respond effectively, and any work of the Safer Neighbourhood Board to gather assurance around this.

We also wish to hear from some of the organisations commissioned for prevention and diversion work such as Mentivation and St Giles Trust.
			The item is intended to help answer the questions below:
			What approach is the Integrated Gangs Unit taking to tackle gang related violence?
			What tools does it use?
			How is the Metropolitan Police's Gangs Matrix used by unit partners and what are its benefits and risks?

Section 60 orders allow for searches to be carried out without suspicion. Hackney was subject to nine borough-wide Section 60 orders in the year up the 15th May, the third highest in London ⁴ . This item will explore the numbers of and outcomes from stop and
	How is the community being kept informed, and how are good quality interactions with the public during the deployment of Stop and Search being best achieved?	Sue Williams, Central East Commander, Metropolitan Police Service (or other Police representative) Central Police Units (to be confirmed)	we note differing views from different quarters around greater use of stop and search powers – including Section 60s - within the wider response to the escalations in violence. A recent report from the Centre for Social Justice ⁵ has called for increased stop and search activity as a means of tackling violence, and is critical of how 'proactive policing in the form of stop and search has been under sustained attack for years'. On the other side of the debate, one of the major concerns around stop and search is the disproportionality in terms of those who are being searched. For many years evidence has shown that stop and search is used disproportionately on those from (BAME) groups – in particular young black men - and young people ⁶ . This disproportionality is commonly linked with the lower levels of confidence that these groups have in the police and the criminal justice system, and (despite the stated focus of stop and search on tackling serious violence) their greater likelihood of being penalised for more minor crimes.

			Critics of the use of Section 60 powers - such as Liberty - argue that they are overly broad.
			There is concern that Section 60s and stop and search activity generally - often regarded as 'coercive tactics' - can bring negative impacts on police relationships with the communities they serve ⁷ .
			There have also been historical concerns around the quality of interactions between the police and the community, and the further impact that these can have on trust and confidence ⁸ .
			This item will gauge the action being taken to reassure the community, to keep them informed and to achieve good quality interactions with the public during its deployment.
	How is the Community Safety Partnership working to ensure effective relationships with the community?	Sue Williams, Central East Commander, Metropolitan Police Service (or other Police representative)	Data for Hackney suggests that the trust and confidence aspect should be an area of focus. MOPAC's Public Attitudes Survey shows there have been quite significant reductions in the proportions of Hackney residents reporting positive perceptions of the police, across a range of measures. The scale of these reductions have not generally been replicated at a London level.

		Central Police Units (to be confirmed)	to feel that the police can be relied on to be there when needed. However, they are significantly less likely to likely to feel well informed about local police activities, to feel that the police are dealing with the things that matter to the community, and to believe that the police are doing a good job in the local area. Perhaps most concerning is the fall in the proportion of residents feeling that the police treat everyone fairly regardless of who they are. This places Hackney in bottom place of all London boroughs on this measure. Hackney's Safer Neighbourhood Board is the primary borough-level mechanism for local engagement in policing. It also oversees the Independent Advisory Group which works to encourage positive interactions between the police and community. We will seek to hear from these groups around their work and findings. In addition – and given the falls in confidence levels – we hope to hear from the police directly.
4 th March 2019 Room 102 Hackney Town Hall Agenda dispatch: 22 nd February	Findings of investigations into contract management Cabinet Member for Housing Services – Discussion with Cabinet Member for Housing Services	Cllr Clayeon McKenzie, Cabinet Member for Housing Services	During the last 18 months the Commission held a number of items relating to the management of contracts by the Council's Housing Services. These saw it receiving regular updates on the performance and management of one specific major contract - that for Specialist Electrical Works with Morgan Sindall - and holding a more general discussion item focusing the benefits, risks and issues with some of Housing Services' larger 'partnering' contracts.
2019			In July 2018 a detailed set of findings from this work were handed over to the Scrutiny Panel. With the Scrutiny Panel planning to contribute to the Council's planned development of a Sustainable Procurement Strategy which it is understood will include defining an approach to outsourcing and insourcing of services, this was in order that the findings could help inform this.

			In addition, the Commission wrote to the Cabinet Member for Housing Services asking for his attendance at a Commission meeting.
			This is in order that he can respond to three issues with specific regards to Housing Services which the work identified. The letter set out in detail the findings of the Commission in these areas. It explained that questioning on the evening would be focused on these. The areas are:
			(Cabinet Member for Housing Services') view around the need to achieve sustainable in house Clerks of Works and Quantity Surveying functions and to ensure their effective deployment, and any plans to support this.
			 Resident liaison functions within contracts - any work by Housing Services to enable the in-house delivery of resident liaison functions, within both existing partnering contracts and any future large housing contracts.
			Any update on work to tackle issues around underpricing at tender stage

	Thames Water Main Burst in the Leabridge Ward – follow up on session 21st November 2018 Presentation by William Hodgson on research into Microsites in Hoxton	Thames Water staff	Thames Water attended a specially convened Commission meeting on the 21st November 2018. This was to discuss their response to the trunk main burst which had caused significant flooding in the Leabridge Ward the previous month. At that meeting and in response to questions from residents, local organisations and Commission Members, Thames Water advised that investigations on the cause of the event and its response still being carried out and that insurance, compensation arrangements were being worked through, and that the latest burst would help inform future improvement programmes. This item has been scheduled to receive updates on these elements and others. As part of a PhD, William Hodgson has been seeking to answer the following questions: Can sites be identified, which are not currently considered suitable or whose ownership is not clear, where self-building offers a solution to their development? What kind of engagement process is required to ensure such projects are acceptable to local communities? With the Commission having an interest in the area of housing availability and affordability, William Hodgson has been invited to present his findings.
	Housing Services' development of an Asset Management Strategy	Ajman Ali, Director of Housing Services	In the meeting of 14 th June 2018 the Commission heard that the Council was developing an Asset Management Strategy setting out the investment requirements over the next five years.
